

Below is a shoulder patch worn by the U.S. Ninth Air Force, a Tactical Air Command component of the United States Strategic Air Forces in Europe (USSTAF).

Between May 1, 1944 and the invasion on June 6, the Ninth flew approximately 35,000 sorties, attacking targets such as bridges, airfields, railroad yards, and coastal gun positions.

