

In 1938, this English mansion called Bletchley Park, was purchased by Sir Hugh Sinclair, the Head of Secret Intelligence Service (MI6). In August of that year, a group from MI6 and the Government Code and Cypher School spent about a month examining the facilities and planning the code breaking operation it was to become. To disguise their true purpose, this delegation said they were "Captain Ridley's Shooting Party."

Photo 3

